ONE MILLION DOLLAR MILESTONE: A MESSAGE FROM THE LEADERSHIP TEAM

The Center for Arab American Philanthropy (CAAP) reached a major milestone in 2015: for the first time in its history, CAAP has granted more than one million dollars in one year.

One million dollars. Depending on the context, the number may seem large or small. However, when you think about the number as the sum of contributions from hundreds of community members, one million dollars starts to take on a different meaning.

What does one million dollars in grants really look like? Through this report, we want to show you CAAP's impact: the donors we serve, the leaders we build and the organizations we work with to improve communities. Additionally, this year's annual report is going to give you a better picture of how the Arab American community can showcase its generosity, and shape perceptions, when we give through CAAP.

It is powerful to say "in 2015, the Arab American community gave more than $1 million in grants to improve communities around the world." In 2016, let's be bolder: let's give smart and give together to make our world a more just, equitable, and vibrant place to live.

Sincerely,
Maha Freij

SHAPING PERCEPTIONS

CAAP shapes perceptions about the Arab American community through several initiatives that highlight Arab American contributions to society, including the 100 Arab Americans Who Care events that we launched in spring of 2014. These events demonstrate the amazing impact we can have when we give smart and give together! In FY 2015, more than 140 individuals gave together through CAAP 100 Arab Americans Who Care events.

100 ARAB AMERICAN WOMEN BREAK GROUND FOR OVARIAN CANCER RESEARCH AND AWARENESS

On March 28, 2015, CAAP hosted its second 100 Arab American Women Who Care in Southeast Michigan at the Arab American National Museum. At the event, $10,000 was raised and awarded to The Belinda Sue Fund for Ovarian Cancer Research and Awareness through a competitive voting process. The event uses a crowdfunding model wherein each attendee donates $100 and submits the name of a charity she is passionate about. Three charities are randomly drawn and a supporter of each of those charities speaks about why her charity is most deserving.

Karma Adra, whose mother suffered from ovarian cancer and is now in remission, spoke passionately about The Belinda Sue Fund, stating that supporting the Fund was a way to give back to an organization that is working for her mom and for all women. After each supporter speaks, a vote is taken and the winning charity is awarded the grant. The Belinda Sue Fund will use the grant to fund research in finding an early detection tool for ovarian cancer. The hope is that a long-sought-after early detection tool will help save more lives.

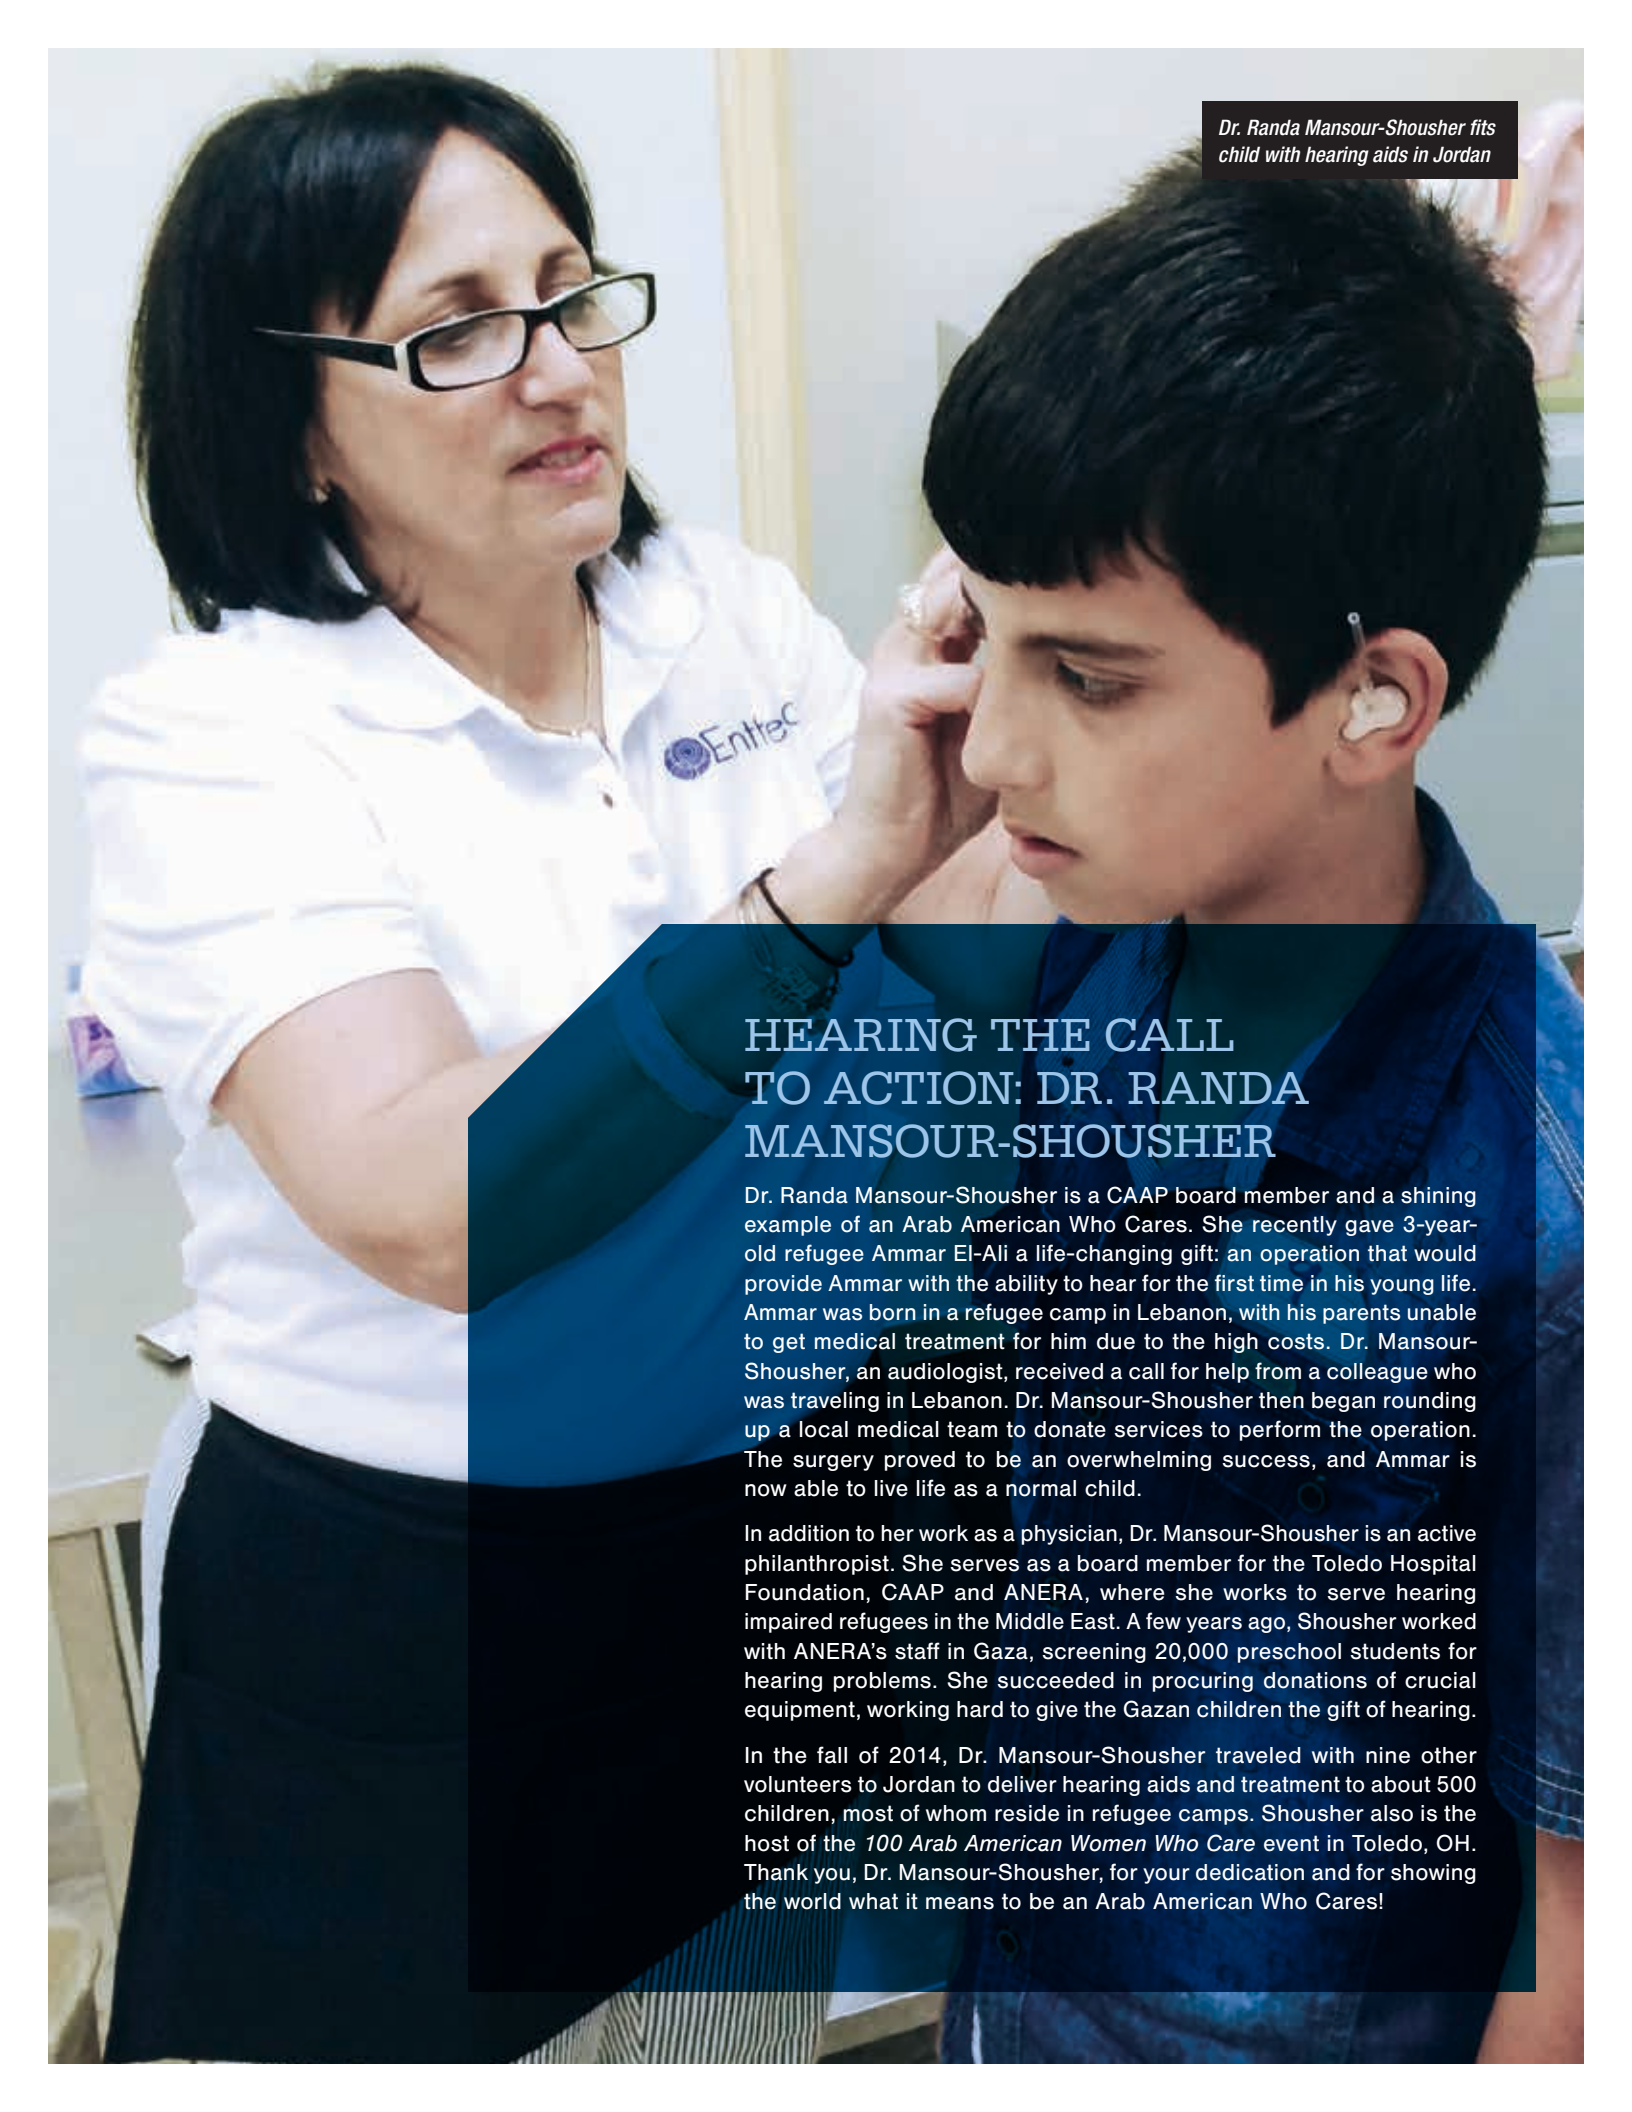

PUTTING THE SPOTLIGHT ON ARAB AMERICANS WHO CARE

The Arab American community is incredibly generous with its time, talent and treasure. Through our Arab Americans Who Care blog series, we are putting the spotlight on dozens who possess the initiative and tenacity to make our world a better place in which to live.

HEARING THE CALL TO ACTION: DR. RANDA MANSOUR-SHOUSER

Dr. Randa Mansour-Shousher is a CAAP board member and a shining example of an Arab American Who Cares. She recently gave 3-year-old refugee Ammar El-Ali a life-changing gift: an operation that would provide Ammar with the ability to hear for the first time in his young life. Ammar was born in a refugee camp in Lebanon, with his parents unable to get medical treatment for him due to the high costs. Dr. Mansour-Shousher, an audiologist, received a call for help from a colleague who was traveling in Lebanon. Dr. Mansour-Shousher then began rounding up a local medical team to donate services to perform the operation. The surgery proved to be an overwhelming success, and Ammar is now able to live life as a normal child.

In addition to her work as a physician, Dr. Mansour-Shousher is an active philanthropist. She serves as a board member for the Toledo Hospital Foundation, CAAP and ANERA, where she works to serve hearing impaired refugees in the Middle East. A few years ago, Shousher worked with ANERA's staff in Gaza, screening 20,000 preschool students for hearing problems. She succeeded in procuring donations of crucial equipment, working hard to give the Gazan children the gift of hearing.

In the fall of 2014, Dr. Mansour-Shousher traveled with nine other volunteers to Jordan to deliver hearing aids and treatment to about 500 children, most of whom reside in refugee camps. Shousher also is the host of the 100 Arab American Women Who Care event in Toledo, OH. Thank you, Dr. Mansour-Shousher, for your dedication and for showing the world what it means to be an Arab American Who Cares!

IMPROVING COMMUNITIES

Through our more than $1.1 million in grantmaking this year, CAAP improved and empowered communities around the world. From human services, to arts and culture, to education, CAAP grantmaking impacts a diverse range of areas. One of CAAP's greatest collaborations in 2015 was helping to launch a fund to support orphans in Gaza, thanks to the leadership of business leaders Abbas and Samar Zuaiter. We are grateful for the leaders and donors who enabled us to pull together and serve children in need this year.

GROWING HOPE FROM THE RUBBLE: CAAP FOSTERS OPPORTUNITIES FOR ORPHANED YOUTH IN GAZA

One couple had a vision, and CAAP helped them carry it out. Business leaders Abbas and Samar Zuaiter wanted a vehicle to meaningfully and sustainably respond to the 2014 crisis in Gaza. They established the Fostering Leadership for Young Palestinians (FLYP) at CAAP, which supports the Welfare Association in Palestine. Mr. Zuaiter says, "I established the FLYP Fund at CAAP because I believe in the strategic impact it achieves through empowering Arab Americans to give together."

Through the Orphans of Gaza 2014 Program, the Welfare Association is currently serving more than 2,500 orphaned children through a comprehensive strategic approach that meets their needs from infancy through age 22. From healthcare and housing, to school uniforms and university fees, to vocational training and employability skills, the program surrounds each orphan with a fully-integrated support system throughout their critical years of childhood and adolescence. With the contributions of numerous donors and multiple fundraisers around the country, CAAP was able to raise more than $200,000, which showcases the amazing power of giving collectively. The Zuaiters matched these gifts at 50% to support hundreds of orphans.

MICHIGAN TEENS RAISE FUNDS FOR GAZA YOUTH

Teenagers Noura, Leena and Zackary Ghannam launched their own initiative to support the FLYP fund in the summer of 2015. By collecting donated toys, clothes and other items for a garage sale fundraiser, they were able to raise $1,000 to help sponsor an orphan's needs for one year. Noura says, "It is important to understand and recognize how lucky a lot of us are and not take our luxuries for granted. We hope to encourage other teenagers and event adults to give back to those who need help, so they can grow up and have the same amazing opportunities we have."

SERVING DONORS

Through all our programs and services, CAAP assists and empowers donors to strengthen their charitable giving. This year alone and for the first time in our history, donors to CAAP's more than 80 funds cumulatively gave more than $1.1 million – demonstrating a true commitment to impacting the world for the better. On the following page we highlight just one of the funds that is giving Arab Americans a voice through the social sciences.

HELPING DONORS FULFILL THEIR DREAMS: THE DR. PHILIP M. KAYAL FUND FOR ARAB AMERICAN RESEARCH

The Arab American community is diverse, often misunderstood, underrepresented and understudied. With this in mind, Dr. Philip Kayal, chairman emeritus of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Seton Hall University, approached CAAP with his idea to support Arab American research. The Dr. Philip M. Kayal Fund for Arab American Research was established, fulfilling Dr. Kayal's desire to support young Arab American scholars and social science research on the Arab American community.

"There is an enormous need for factual information on Arab Americans, and as an academic of Syrian ancestry, I wanted to help fill the void," says Dr. Kayal. "I set up a research fund with the gracious help and support of CAAP, which made both the grant application and distribution process seamless. I never expected to be as pleased with the results."

In its first year, the Fund provided grant awards to six scholars across the country, with research topics ranging from stereotyping of Arab American adolescents to Palestinian cinema, to Yemeni farm workers and more. Grant awardee Claudia Youakim at the University of Florida, who is researching Arab American identity constructs among college students, says "I am honored to be a grant recipient of the Dr. Philip M. Kayal Fund for Arab American Research! I am excited to share my research on Arab American ethnic identity with others at upcoming conferences, and the opportunity to collaborate with fellow scholars."

By supporting effective research, this Fund will strengthen programs serving the community, provide education about the contributions of the Arab American community to this country, and enable Arab Americans to have a stronger voice to shape their future within American society.

BUILDING LEADERS

Through our youth philanthropy program – the Teen Grantmaking Initiative (TGI) – CAAP builds leaders around the country. This past year we worked to expand TGI nationally, establishing three exciting partnerships with Youth and Leaders Living Actively (YALLA) San Diego, the Arab American Community Center (AACC) in Orlando and Somali Family Service of San Diego – the newest hosts of our TGI program.

SHERBL MADALO KNOWS HE DOESN'T HAVE TO BE BRUCE WAYNE TO BE A PHILANTHROPIST

Though he may not wear a cape and cowl, 10-year-old Sherbl Madalo is just as much of a do-gooder and superhero as his idol Batman. Sherbl and his family escaped a war to come to this country as refugees seven years ago, and it was not long after arriving in El Cajon, Calif. that Sherbl started to love his new home. "Everyone was so nice to me," Sherbl told us, "and I wanted to do something nice for them."

Sherbl has played competitive soccer for several years and loves being part of a team. He loves playing chess, being a student and enjoys being a good friend to the people in his life. In order to give back to the community that has been so welcoming, Sherbl and his friends from the YALLA San Diego Youth Leadership Committee decided to raise money and grant it to charitable organizations that serve their community.

To give them a hand in their new role as philanthropists, CAAP provided YALLA with a seed grant and technical assistance to establish a new TGI chapter.

After selling homemade bracelets, holding a recycling drive and starting their own festival, Sherbl and his friends were able to raise $1,000, which they decided to grant to two local environmental organizations: the Ocean Discovery Institute and ReInterpret.

When asked about what he would say to others in order to inspire them to give back, Sherbl told us to "think of a time when someone did something nice for you, and remember how that felt. You can help make others feel the same way."

TGI GRANTEE SPOTLIGHT: OCEAN DISCOVERY INSTITUTE

The Ocean Discovery Institute in San Diego engages, educates and inspires young people from the City Heights neighborhood – a low income, ethnically diverse community – through science-based exploration and experiences in natural environments. Ocean Discovery Institute offers young people, their families and community members interactive experiences through hands-on science and conservation projects. The organization also works within local elementary and middle schools to provide classroom and field-based ocean science education. This year, the TGI chapter hosted by YALLA San Diego made a grant to the Ocean Discovery Institute to support their Living Lab Ceremonial Groundbreaking event. The event signified the start of construction for a state-of-the-art science facility that will provide tuition-free environmental programming for 20,000 youth per year.
