The Arab American Leadership Program (AALP)

About the Program

The Arab American Leadership Program (AALP) increases access for Arab American youth by awarding summer internships in federal and state government agencies, Capitol Hill, and in other key public service institutions in Washington, D.C.

The AALP seeks to:

- Increase the number of Arab Americans engaged in federal public policy;
- Create networking opportunities between Arab American youth and experienced public policy professionals; and
- Produce a pipeline of Arab Americans with strong public policy experience

By increasing the number of Arab Americans working in the public service sector, the Arab American Leadership Program (AALP) will help strengthen the political power of the Arab American community, ensuring that federal agencies and policy makers are reflective of our community and its related needs. This program will also empower young Arab Americans and create networking and mentorship opportunities, leadership development workshops, and conversations with Arab American leaders, their allies, and others serving in key public policy positions. The AALP will allow young Arab Americans to gain a complex understanding of the federal government, the legislative process, and how to shape policy in their ultimate professions. We seek to create a network of AALP fellows that have a deep passion for engaging in public policy.

This program is organized by the National Network for Arab American Communities (NNAAC) and funded by the Arab American Leadership Fund, housed at the Center for Arab American Philanthropy (CAAP).

Fellowship Details

Awarded applicants will be placed at a summer fellowship position in either a state or federal government agency, Capitol Hill, or a key public service institution in Washington D.C. Fellows will be provided a stipend of $3,000. Assistance for transportation and housing is also available to those who qualify for financial need (up to $2,000). Additional details:

- The AALP is organized by the National Network for Arab American Communities (NNAAC) and funded by the Arab American Leadership Fund, housed at the Center for Arab American Philanthropy (CAAP).
- Once you apply, you will be contacted by NNAAC staff to discuss your application. Accepted applications will be connected to a Congressional office based on the office's needs and interests in candidates. From there, you will interview with the Congressional office for their available internship position. Progression through this stage does not guarantee a congressional internship; ultimately, that decision will be made between you and the offices you interview with.
- The cohort is expected to run between May to August, with official start and end dates to be determined between the Congressional office and the accepted applicant.

Eligibility and Requirements:

- Must be at least 20 years of age or over
- Must be either an undergraduate or graduate student enrolled in college at an accredited college or university in the United States of America, or a recent graduate
- Applicants applying for additional housing and transportation support must demonstrate financial need:
 - For currently enrolled students, applicant must have a completed FASFA on file with the institution's Financial Aid Office
 - For recent graduates, applicant must provide a statement of financial need
- Applicants must have a cumulative GPA of 3.4 or higher
- Applicant must complete the application and interview rounds for the fellowship position
